Long game for this genre. Creative ideas, fun puzzles, challenging hidden object scenes. A great game for any HOG lover - especially when on sale!. Only VR game that has ever made me sick. Also, it has awkward controls and a tiny map with nothing to do. There might be a seed of an idea here that could someday become a fun game for those with iron stomachs, but right now there's not even any real gameplay.. Addicting and frustrating. Perfect for when you have nothing to do.... can't fault this game. love to play it often enough.. It's no Portal 2, but it's still a fun puzzle game.. Intersting style of game. Did enjoy and would like to see if this goes further.. The campaign adds some variety to a simulator that really could use it. You get to play both Entente and Central Powers as you progress through the missions. And it comes with planes!

Need Some Repaints for her. Ape out is fast and fun.

Each of the four levels(and their two parts) are well paced and just when you start to get bored a new mechanic appears.

The best part of the game though is the style and music. Similar to Doom 2016, every time you get a kill the music changes in reaction, with smooth jazz and loud drum crashes. This makes the game exciting as hell and combined with the colorful art-style Ape out is more of like an emotional expression than a game by the end.

Its not very complex, but its simple, stylish and totally worth the price for about 2 hours of fun.. Some things I like:

- 1) This is more of a fast action game than a simulation. You definitely can't sit down and just watch the store at a slow pace. Once I get more than 10 cabinets up and running, I'm always doing something with zero down time. Oddly enough, that's somehow fitting for an "arcade" experience. (although I'm sure this may annoy someone looking for a more laid back experience)
- 2) The in-game arcade cabinets are really good counterparts to ones in the real world. I can name just about every single cabinet.

Things that would make this game better:

- 1) Interface adjustments to make sure icons are always visible, especially when the pillar or entrance is in the way.
- 2) More interesting game game modes, so there isn't just a single difficulty hump. Perhaps adding scenarios with different win conditions, or a survival mode with bigger loan payments every year.

. This game has the potential to be an awesome game. It is very short on content right now but it is early access so that is to be expected. I would honestly recommend the game for its mechanics so far. One thing that I would say needs to be fixed is the sheathing of the sword. If you go to put the end of the blade into the sheath it repeats the sound of unsheathing repeatedly and it is not a pleasant experience. Also tone the volume on effects and music a bit. I would definitely like to talk to the developer(s) about ideas and fixes through means other than a review But this game has the potential to be something awesome. I know I will be keeping it and giving the devs a chance to make a fantastic VR experience

. Time limit added extra difficulty factor. Speedy puzzle.. I usually do not like to use this word, but this game is extremely pretentious. The "story" is basically randomly selected stock footage with thoughtful-ish text and a fancy instagram filter layed over it.

But that would be forgivable if the gameplay was any good. Spoiler alert: it isn't. The game advertizes itself as a puzzle-arcade. But the controls are too restricted for an engaging arcade gameflow. You can only move along a straight line left or right and occasionally up or down. For a such simple movement system the controls are too slippery and often you end up dying because of the horrible input reading.

Puzzle mechanics is absent. There is no thinking involved, because the results of your actions are unpredictable and inconstant. Sometimes the blocks kill you upon contact, sometimes you need to touch the exact same blocks to finish the level. Sometimes the blocks move left, sometimes they move right, sometimes they do nothing or just crush you by randomly spinning. The game does nothing to telegraph the movements, so you won't be able to "solve" the level. Basically it's a memory game with tedious execution.

The only advantage Subway has is the art direction. It's incredibly stylish and pleasant to experience. Design and music create the relaxing "zen" atmosphere the developers were obviously going for.

*To sum up, this is barely a game. Neither the arcade, nor the puzzle mechanics are engaging. The story is paint by numbers New Age pseudo-wisdom. Maybe it could work better on mobile, but as a PC experience it's a borefest with some nice visuals to look at.. This game was okay in the moment, but then had too many random terms. I have been in hetero relationships the entire time and all of a sudden I am dating the same sex randomly at the opening of a chapter. Wtf?? I thought this was my character. I stopped playing after that. Nothing against same-sex relationships, but I perceived this as more of a giant programming glitch or bad writing.. Wow this was better than I was expecting. Think spaceship with VTOL style single joystick (no thrust controls, just the joystick, so not sure if speed can be controlled. It's a 6dof type vtol steering system where you can shoot asteroids and enemy* attackers. It seems to have gone on forever so I quit because I wasn't confident I'd be going to another level and was perhaps just a high score style game? Have to check back later. Enemies and asteroids spawn in an out of the world seemingly randomly. Way fun for the price and would be great for someones first time VR space experience with motion controllers. Absolutely recommend.. A nice add-on for flavor.
